Pdf rotation does not save

DerfK's response offers a pdftk that fits well but isn't provided in Fedora with at least Fedora 21. pdf-stapler Alternative (actually listed in Fedora 23 when searching for pdftk package) — pdf-stapler: pdf-stapler cat input.pdf 1D output.pdf will rotate 180° (D) the first page (1) input.pdf in output.pdf. See pdf-stapler -h. pdfjam I just noticed the completion of the tab offered me pdf180 (along with pdf90 and pdf270). This is a wrapper for pdfjam --suffix returned180 --angle 180 --fitpaper true input.pdf, which you can use as simple as pdf180 input.pdf -o output.pdf (output is optional unless provided, pdf180 output on $PWD /input-rotated180.pdf). Other alternatives to answering this question on ask.fedora.org, in addition to explaining why pdftk is not available for Fedora because (at least) Fedora 21 is worth checking out because they list several other alternatives that are presumably capable of rotating PDFs. This service allows you to rotate PDF documents forever, for free. How do I return a PDF permanently? All you have to do is select the PDF document you want to rotate on your computer, choose a rotation angle, and click. We are of great importance for the safe handling of your PDF documents.
